

Session E31 – Threats of Tomorrow

About the Speaker

Eric Levin

Eric Levin is a Sr. Product Manager with Qualys Inc and is currently the QualysGuard product manager responsible for the product roadmap as well as the evaluation and selection of technology partners for Qualys. Prior to joining Qualys, Eric held several posts at Deloitte. Most recently, Eric helped to establish Deloitte's Global Security Office. He was one of two individuals who chartered this function within Deloitte. His role on the team was to establish a common, global security architecture, establish and maintain relevant security vendor relationships, and oversee global security operations. In addition to designing and deploying a security information management framework, Eric was directly responsible for establishing a common security assessment process which was centered around Deloitte's global use of QualysGuard.

Prior to chartering the Global Security Office, Mr. Levin worked in a client service role for Deloitte. Many of the engagements Mr. Levin was involved in consisted of designing secure network architectures, performing security assessment functions, and deploying enterprise-wide security solutions, including identity management solutions, for several of Deloitte's largest clients.

Before Deloitte, Eric worked for Ernst & Young in their ISAAS practice. He primarily focused on performing security assessments and Y2K readiness assessments.

Eric began his professional career as an independent middle market consultant, servicing organizations in the greater Chicagoland area.
