Session Synopsis

The finalization of the Omnibus rule has expanded the scope of compliance with HIPAA to more than hospitals and doctor's offices. Did you know that a bank may be required to comply with HIPAA? What about a data center? This learning session is designed to provide a greater understanding of the current HIPAA regulatory environment and of HIPAA's information security, privacy, and breach requirements.

Objectives:

- Define the current HIPAA security, privacy, and breach notification regulatory requirements.
- Means to address HIPAA requests from clients and regulators

Speaker Information

Johanna Terronez, Senior Manager, Business Advisory Services Grant Thornton LLP

Johanna has 14 years of experience delivering internal control design, implementation, and testing services to large, global organizations within the financial services, healthcare, technology and insurance industries. During her career with a Big Four public accounting firm and Grant Thornton, Johanna has worked with covered entities, including providers and payors, such as hospitals, physicians and dental practices, managed care providers, and business associates servicing the healthcare industry, including software-as-a-service, outsourced data center and managed hosting, data analytics, and printing and mailing companies. Additionally, she has worked with the regulators to help remediate findings identified through the regulators HIPAA audits. Johanna has extensive experience in scoping, planning, executing, and managing SOC 1 (formerly SAS 70), 2 and 3 readiness and attestation examinations, Sarbanes Oxley 404 IT readiness and attestation reviews, IT Internal Auditing and external financial statement auditing. Johanna has performed risk assessments and compliance reviews, related to HIPAA and varying privacy regulations. She has successfully completed the CISA certification exam and passed the accreditation process.
